UK Outlook for Tuesday 16 Nov 2021 to Thursday 25 Nov 2021:
Remaining changeable to the north through the start of this period as low-pressure systems slowly move away, bringing largely cloudy skies to many and further rain to the north. Elsewhere while rain is possible at times, drier and clearer conditions are still possible in the far southeast, after the early fog clears. Temperatures are likely to recover following a rather cold start. Into the second half of the period, the weather is likely to become drier and more settled, although occasional spells of rain remain likely in the north. Temperatures are likely to trend down towards the end of the month. This would bring an increasing chance of some wintry conditions, mainly over the higher ground in the north, but with a slight risk to lower levels.
